Mrs. Sessums Words of Wisdom

- "One of the rules I live by and I attempt to instill in my students is that being early is on time, being on time is late and late means being left behind. Ten minutes is an achievable goal for an early arrival which actually builds a surprising number of powerful life and career skills. These skills include time management, self-discipline, reliability and professionalism. When you're early, you avoid the panic of running late which helps develop calmness, patience, and the ability to stay composed under pressure. As an educator part of my job is to prepare my students for the transition from school to career. The "early is on time, on time is late, late means being left behind" rule is just one of the many life lessons I trust my students will retain beyond graduation."
